Jake the snake and Gail the snail lived
by a lake in the east of France.
They wanted to go on a trip.
They felt it would be good for their health.

"Where will we go?" asked Jake.

"How about Spain?" asked Gail.

"How will we get there?" asked Jake.
"I think we will take a plane,"
said Gail.
"No way! I hate to fly," wailed Jake.
"Then you can go by rail," said Gail.
"Hey, I do not want to go by rail," wailed Jake.
"I think trains are a pain.
I hate both trains and planes.
What will I do?
I want to go with you to Spain."

"I know what you can do," said Gail.
"You can go to Spain on a big ship."
"That is a great plan," said Jake.
"I like to sail.
Gee, Gail, you must have such a great brain to think up such a good plan."
Jake was so happy that he wagged
his long tail.

"When will we leave?" asked Jake.
"I cannot wait to sail to Spain."
"You have to leave now," said Gail.
"It will take you a long time to sail
to Spain.
I will leave a week later on a speedy plane.
We will meet in Spain."
Jake and Gail paid for their tickets.
Jake sailed for Spain the next day.
A week later, Gail took a plane
to Spain.

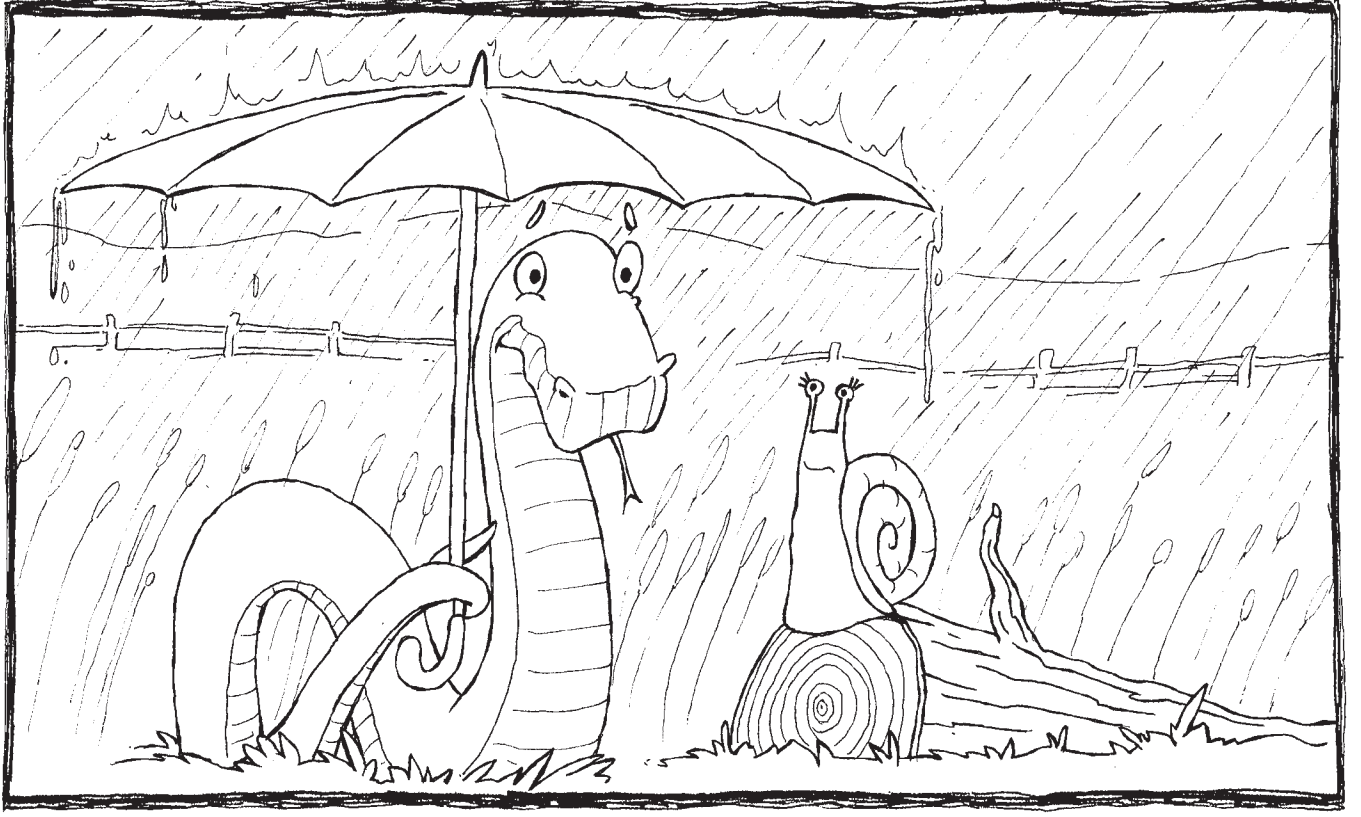

Jake and Gail met on a plain in Spain.
 The weather was very bad.
 It rained each day they were in Spain.
 "It never fails," said Jake.
 "It always rains when I take a trip.
 What will we do now?"
 "We can go eat a steak while we think about what to do," said Gail.

Jake and Gail ate such a big steak.
 It was so big that it weighed
 as much as a freight train.
 Then Gail had another great plan.
 "We can paint," she said.
 "Spain is a land of great painters.
 We will be great painters, too."

So Gail and Jake went to get brushes and paint.

Each day that it rained, they stayed inside and painted.

The people of Spain hailed Gail and Jake as great painters from France.

13

They paid Jake and Gail lots of cash
for their paintings.
Jake and Gail mailed their paintings
all over the land.
They stayed in Spain for a long time and got rich from their paintings.
